

January 2017 - Broderick H.

“A lot of people don’t know that I’m good at basketball, actually really good. I played throughout my childhood and eventually for Southern University of New Orleans”. Broderick had every intention of going pro, until he broke his foot and was out for two seasons. It was time for a new direction.

“B” was raised by his grandmother, who always instilled positivity in his life. Growing up in New Orleans there is a lot of opportunity to do wrong, she guided him to do what is right. She not only dared him to dream, but gave him the confidence to go after that dream. She not only instructed him to be optimistic, but to be a word of encouragement for others.

“Although my grandmother has passed, I still wake up at 6:30 in the morning, just as I did with her. I don’t drink coffee like she would, but I make time to read the paper and pray”. Keeping their routine keeps her close. Broderick then continues his day by working at BreWingz (full time). “BreWingz has given me a sense of stability for the first time since I’ve moved away from my grandmother and hometown of New Orleans”. In just three short years, Broderick has become a key supervisor, a top bartender, and his favorite – a trainer. Keeping his word to his grandmother he strives to be a word of encouragement to the staff he trains and works with. After work he finds time to read and relax. “I’m really a homebody. I’m enjoying the peace in my life”.

This industry is the first thing Broderick has had a passion for since basketball. Even with a degree from SUNO in business administration, he connected with this environment. He takes pride in the amount of movement he has made within the company in such a small amount of time. He puts in his best efforts, and it shows. “Professionally, I want to become a GM and run my own store. Personally, I consider myself a family man. I enjoy spending time with my nephew and nieces. I eventually want a family of my own, and finally feel comfortable with that idea with the stability I have in my life now.”

When we say we’re “family-friendly”, that includes our employees! BreWingZ acknowledges the hard work of each team member and values who they are on and off the clock.
