

April 2017 – Leamon G.

“A simple ‘Thank you’ can mean so much. Just a second of recognition can encourage and change someone’s entire attitude.” Leamon, a BOH trainer and cook for BreWingZ, spends a great deal emphasizing the importance of attitude and appreciation in his personal and professional life. “I wake, pray, and take it one day at a time. One thing I do well is “check” myself. Everyone gets thrown off track sometimes. Everyone. But I am able to learn, grow, adapt, and continue on my day the best I can. And even more, I hope I am able to show others they can do the same.” And he does.

Leamon has worked for BreWingz for three years in multiple locations. He hopes to become a Kitchen Manager, but is in no rush to do so, “I like to take my time with things. I like to learn, actually learn, not just go through the motions. I don’t like to make mistakes. So I take my time and do it right the first time.” Right now, he truly enjoys being a trainer. He often calls on the staff he last trained to check on them and see how things are doing. He takes responsibility on how well they are doing, and believes it is a reflection on how well he does as a trainer.

Leamon grew up in a large family, and has spent most of his life raising a large family himself. Together, he and his wife have 11 children, the youngest being 10 and the oldest 35. He works full time at BreWingz to support his family, and they stay very close. Every Sunday, as a tradition, they have family dinner and all get together. When Leamon finds time to relax, he enjoys the simple things such as binge watching shows on Amazon with his wife. With such a large family, it’s not very often you get time to relax, so he takes full advantage of it when he can. Then he likes to end his day just the way it started, with a prayer and a positive attitude.
