

December 2017 - Sal C.

Sal grew up South East of Houston in the Nassau Bay area. Looking for direction, he moved to central Houston and began working for Brewingz in 2013 at the Wayside location. He started as a bus boy, worked as a dishwasher, expo, server, bartender, and now as a Key Manager for the past 2 years. And even though he has moved back to the Nassau Bay area, he enjoys his work and team at Brewingz and has stayed with the company since its opening in 2013. He mostly enjoys his key shifts, "I feel I am the most useful as a Key. I enjoy helping the team. I never just stand around, nothing is too small for me to do. I'll run food, bus tables, whatever is needed." If you asked any of his co-workers they wouldn't hesitate to agree, Sal is a team player and does everything asked of him.

When he's not at Brewingz, you'll most likely find Sal working his second job. For years Sal has been working non-stop to save for his future dreams- professional and personal. Taking after his dad's side of the family, he wishes to own a local pizza shop. He already has the perfect location in mind, and learns first hand from his father the tricks of the trade. He also saves for his future with his fiancé. Working hard to save up for the perfect ring, he finally saved enough and proposed in September of this year during a trip to California.

Recently, over the Thanksgiving holiday, his fiancé's engagement ring was misplaced. In an attempt to find it, he posted on social media for help. Little did he know, the post went viral, attracting the local news station who held an interview on Thanksgiving. Since the interview Sal and his fiancé have had businesses all over Houston reach out to help with the wedding; from offers to catering, to furniture for their house, and of course, offers to help purchase a new ring. All the offers were more than appreciated and showed the true spirit of the season, but were respectfully declined. In an explanation as to why he declined the offers Sal says "This wasn't why I posted about the ring, we didn't want handouts, we simply wanted that ring back. We aren't materialistic people, but that ring represented my hard work and dedication, and everything I would do for her."

The Brewingz team appreciates all Sal does for the team, and wishes him and his fiancé the best of luck in their future!
